“Your Business in Scotland” – A very successful day

THE Airth Castle Hotel near Stirling provided an excellent venue for a well attended and successful event in mid June focusing on Scottish issues.

Organised by Julia Blundell, BHTA's education and training manager, more than eight out of 10 delegates rated the day as 'Good' or 'Very Good', finding the following sessions of particular interest: Lobbying in Scotland, NHS Procurement in Scotland, the role of BHTA and the Code of Practice.

Delegate Lisa Barry of Glasgow-based firm SSL Scotland formerly Stairlifts (Scotland) Ltd, said: “In our company we put high store on events which put a proper perspective on matters which directly affect Scotland, and this conference was a great effort by the BHTA, proving that it was determined to get to the heart of issues which really affect us.

“It covered many of the topics which currently affect businesses like ours, where procurement issues are concerned, and also gave us the very welcome chance to meet key decision makers such as Mike Healey, head of NHS procurement in Scotland.”

Ray Hodgkinson said: “I couldn't have put it better myself! The day proved there is a valuable role for the BHTA to play in giving a focal point for Scottish companies. We are planning to hold another meeting before the end of the year, where we can develop the Scottish agenda and provide a forum for Scottish businesses.”
